Dr. Johnson's Spelling. Dr. Johnson's ignorance of deriva-ions led him to absurdities of spelling that were admitted even by Boswell, Dr. Johnson's methods in tracing ety-mologies were of the simplest. "This is mologies were of the simplest. "This is a great work, sir," said Dr. Adams to him. "How are you to get all the etymologies?" "Why, sir," replied John-ment of Mr. Skinner, who has large him. "How are you to get all the ety-mologies?" "Why, sir," replied John-son, "here is a shelf with Junius and Skinner and others, and there is a Welsh gentleman who has published a offection of Welsh proverbs who will help me with the Welsh." And so the famous dictionary was written, with little assistance from the learned, as the dictionary maker himself complain-sent him a list of thirty derivations.

An Artist's Sad Task. Caton Woodville, the English war artist, painted a large equestrian portrait of the Emperor Frederick of Germany in the handsome white uniform of the Imperial guards; with the magnificent golden helmet crowned by the H. I painted the portrait shortly after the emperor's death, and the empress was very particular about the color and shape of his eyes. She wore bracelet with a miniature of one of is eyes painted on ivory in a medallion upon it. She stood beside me for hours holding the bracelet, so that I could see it in the best light and not miss any of the fletails."

The Crab in the Oyster.
"The little crab found in the oyster." said a dealer, "is not, as supposed by two-thirds of the oyster eaters, the young of the blue crab, but is a distinct species. It is a messmate of and caterer to the wants of the oyster, being, therefore, a benefit instead of a detriment to the latter. In return for the oyster's kindness in protecting it against its enemies the little crab catches and crushes food which in its entire state could not be taken by the oyster. A singular thing in connection with them is that all found inside of the oyster are females. The male of the same variety has a hard shell."-Exchange.

Little Elmer-Grampa, why do you look so sad? Grandpa-I was just thinking. Here I am, sixty years of age, and I have never done anything that will be likely to make posterity remember me. Little Elmer-Oh, well, don't worry. Mebby you'll still have a chance to live in history as somebody's grandfather.
